

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A mobile apparatus is provided for exchanging data objects over several network. The mobile apparatus exchanges
5 data objects of a first data format over a first network and exchanges data of a second data format over a second network. The mobile apparatus comprises configurable processing means. When configured, processing means converts data of the first format received from the first network to 10 data of the second format. Processing means then forwards converted data to the second network.